In light of today's decision by the Supreme Court of Canada, MP Brad Trost reconfirms his strong support for the traditional definition of marriage.

“In the election last June, I made a commitment to the people of Saskatoon-Humboldt to uphold the traditional definition of marriage. I will continue to vigorously support the definition of marriage as the voluntary union of one man and one woman to the exclusion of all others,” Trost said.

The Conservative Party of Canada, led by Stephen Harper, has always maintained that this issue should be debated in the House of Commons. Today's Supreme Court decision confirms that position.

MP Brad Trost will support the traditional definition of marriage in any upcoming vote in Parliament.
